CHINA WIRELESS ANNOUNCES ALLIANCE WITH BEIJING TELEVISION INTERWAY IN MARKETING AND SALES OF BROADBAND ACCESS SERVICES

DENVER, CO December 3, 2003/PRNewswire-FirstCall -- China Wireless Communications, Inc. (OTCBB: CWLC) announced today it has signed a strategic alliance agreement with a large Beijing-based ISP – Beijing Television Interway Communications and Technology Limited Corporation (BTICT). The two companies will cooperate in marketing and sales of broadband access services.

BTICT owns a fiber optic network in Beijing and holds an ISP license. China Wireless will take advantage of its wireless technology to meet the high bandwidth requirement of BTICT's customers. This agreement with BTICT follows China Wireless's cooperation with another ISP partner in November. China Wireless is implementing its business plan to penetrate the broadband access services market through ISP partnerships.

Mr. Brad Woods, the CEO and President of China Wireless commented, "We expect cooperative partnership with BTICT to offer us a large customer base and bring in more revenues for broadband access services business in the future."

About Beijing Television Interway (BTICT):

Beijing Television Interway Communications and Technology Limited Corporation ("Beijing Television Interway") was founded by Beijing Television Development Group and State Development and Investment Company in 2000 to develop information technology in Beijing City.
